Welcome to The National Agricultural Library 93,767 items

The National Agricultural Library (NAL) was created with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) in 1962 and designated a national library in 1962. Located in Beltsville, Maryland, on the grounds of the USDA's Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, NAL is home to one of the world's largest collections devoted to agriculture and related sciences. Since the library has a dual role to serve the public and the USDA, it is committed to expanding online access to its collections. Many of the library's resources and treasures can also be accessed through the NAL Digital Collections.
