Digital FDLP Implementation

Last Updated: September 17, 2024 Published: April 20, 2023

What is a digital FDLP?

A digital FDLP connects the public with the Government information they need, putting digital permanent public access first while recognizing the importance of the existing tangible collection.

The digital change allows GPO and Federal depository libraries to collaborate in new ways and with more partners, including information producers, and with each other – using technology to improve access to collections and services – all to support permanent public access and America Informed.

This change has been happening incrementally for three decades. These are changes in how we deliver the program, not overall changes in what the program is or what our shared goals are; we just have new tools and are in a new environment. The digital transition opens up new opportunities to help our communities find and use Government information.

The Digital FDLP Now	The Digital FDLP in Development
Historic collections that form the tangible National Collection and preservation of those materials	Continue building the National Collection in all digital formats.
Current digital publications harvested and described in the CGP, GovInfo, or in the FDLP Web Archive	Continue digitization at GPO and in partnership
Tools like FDLP Data Manager and FDLP eXchange	Continue harvesting and description of born-digital content
Changes in the work of serving patrons – collections and reference evolve in similar ways that other parts of collections have	Collaborate with agencies to capture content “farther up” in the lifecycle.

Are you seeking information on forestry, plants and animals, wood product science, or Forest Service history? The National Forest Service Library \(NFSL\) has all that and more.

NFSL is a designated field library of the USDA National Agricultural Library (NAL), one of five national libraries of the United States.

NFSL supports Forest Service employees: state.

GovInfo serves as a one-stop website for authentic, published Government information, and provides free public access to millions of official publications and metadata from all three branches of the Federal Government. GovInfo offers access to documents in a variety of formats. It includes current documents produced and published digitally and also digitized, historical documents going back to 1873.

Government Documents

Government Publications at Syracuse University

The government documents collection includes all types of government publications in all formats. This includes digital documents from government internet sites and from tangible sources as we transition toward an all-digital collection. The Syracuse University Libraries is the second oldest depository library in New York State and has been a part of the Federal Depository Library Program for more than 140 years when it was designated by US Congressional Representative Frank Hiscock on Feb 7, 1878. We currently select 62% of documents available to depository libraries. We also collect publications from the State of New York State, City of Syracuse and Onondaga County.

The collection includes over 500,000 paper items, thousands of items in electronic format, over 4,000 CD-DVDs, and over 2 million microfiche. Materials are located on the 3rd floor of Bird Library. Most government publications can be searched for by using the Libraries online catalog.

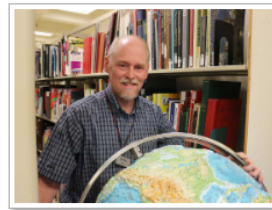

This library is a congressionally designated depository for U.S. government documents. Public access to the government documents collection is guaranteed by public law. (Title 44 United States Code)

General Public Access to Documents at SU Libraries

For Visitors:

All are welcome to use the Government Documents Collection when ever the library is open to the public Monday through Friday 8am to 8pm. Before coming to the Library please familiarize yourself with the "Use and Conduct" and the "Computer Use" links on the Library Policies page as well as other information on using any of the Libraries equipment and online catalog
