Where Did That Document Go? Preserving and Sharing Government Information

Who we are…

- Deborah Yun Caldwell (UNT)
- James R. Jacobs (Stanford)
- Lynda Kellam (UPenn)
- Shari Laster (ASU)

Mission statement

OUR VISION
We imagine a world where government information is preserved and accessible for an engaged public and equitable democracy.
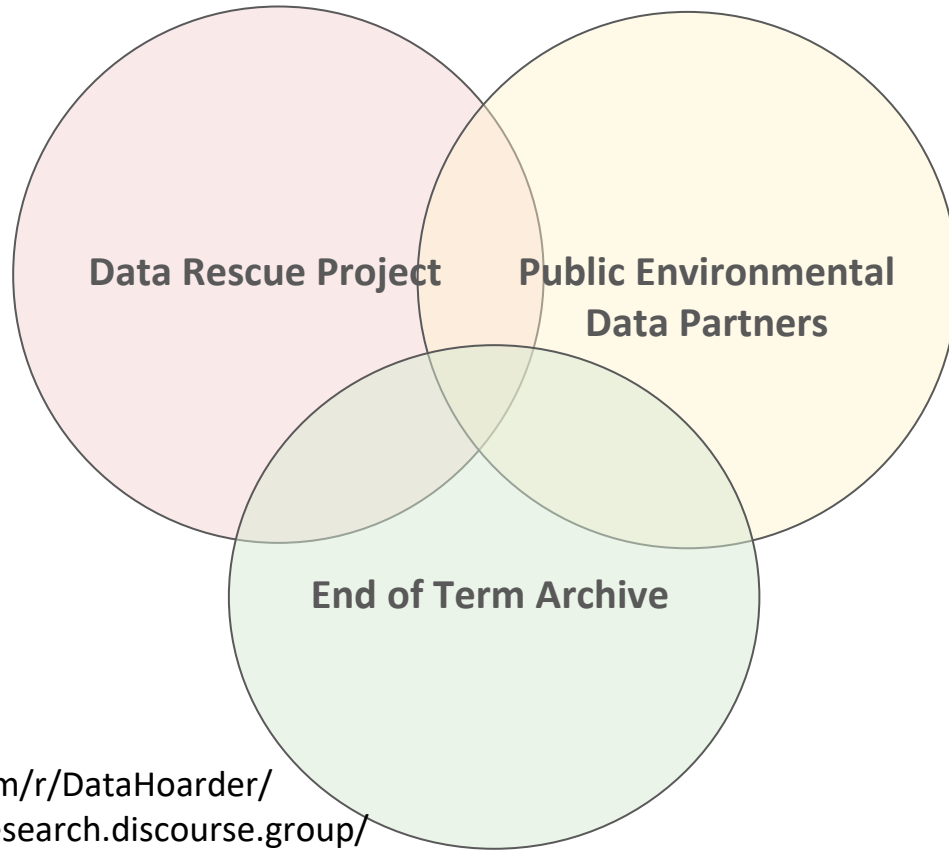

OUR MISSION
The PEGI Project advocates on behalf of current and future users of public information. Developing a community of practice to preserve and provide access to electronic government information is a large endeavor that will take many hands. Together, we seek to build capacity for libraries to preserve historically significant born-digital government information.

Purpose

The End of Term Web Archive captures and saves U.S. Government websites at the end of presidential administrations. The EOT has thus far preserved websites from administration changes in 2008, 2012, 2016, and 2020. We are currently accepting URL nominations for the End of Term 2024 Web Archive.

- ☐ work collaboratively to preserve public U.S. Government websites
- ☐ document federal agencies' presence on the web at the end of each Presidential term (2008, 2012, 2016, 2020, 2024 and counting)
- ☐ enhance the existing research collections of the partner institutions
- ☐ raise awareness about the need for preservation
- ☐ engage with researchers and subject experts

General Timeline of EOT Process

- Jan - Mar - Begin meeting to discuss upcoming EOT
- Mar - Apr - Set up URL Nomination Tool Instance
  https://digital2.library.unt.edu/nomination/
- Apr - Sept - Begin seeking nominations
- Sept - Begin "bookend crawl" (broad scope/comprehensive crawls)
- Sept - Begin human nominated/prioritized crawls (updated every two weeks)
- Dec - Initial bookend crawl completes.
- Feb - Begin second bookend crawl
- Mar - Second bookend crawl completes
- April - May copy and stage data for access at IA
- Following 3 years - Rest. (probably not this term)

Multiple Crawling Institutions: Different Approaches

Internet Archive:

- Heritrix based
- Large, long-running crawls
- Shallow and deep crawls
- Specialized video archiving pipeline
- Static crawling

University of North Texas:

- Heritrix and Browsertrix Crawler based
- Human Nominated Seeds
- New crawls every two weeks
- Broad and shallow browser-based crawling
- High fidelity and static crawling

Webrecorder:

- Browsertrix based
- Targeted interactive web content
- High fidelity crawling

Common Crawl Foundation:

- Nutch crawler-based
- Global crawl biased by search-engine style ranking
- EOT collection is extracted from our global crawl
- Static crawling

End of Term Datasets

The End of Term project is working with the Amazon Web Services' Open Data Sponsorship Program to host a copy of the 2004, 2008, 2012, 2016, and 2020 End of Term Datasets.

The work of inventorying, staging and moving the data into AWS is still ongoing and more information will be provided here in the future.

Currently we have these datasets partially available for use.

Dataset	WARC #	WARC Size Compressed
EOT-2020	239811	266.04 TB
EOT-2016	194683	139.3 TB

Environmental Data & Governance Initiative

Federal Data and The Right to Know

Gretchen Gehrke, PhD

Co-Founder, Environmental Data and Governance Initiative

2025 Depository Library Council Spring Meeting

Environmental Data & Governance Initiative (EDGI)

Who We Are

- Cross-disciplinary network, with more than 50 active members
- Some paid; mostly volunteers

What We Do

- Transform Environmental Right to Know ethics and practices
- Hold governing agencies accountable
- Model democratic values in the way we work

Three Programs

- Public Data, Public Information, Governance Practices

Environmental Right to Know

Why the Right to Know?

- People have a right to know and make decisions about environmental issues, especially that affect them
- Better environmental outcomes come from more democratic environmental governance
- The Environmental Right to Know is an essential component of Environmental Justice

Data Access and Utility

Enhance access to and use of federal data

- We help data become meaningful.
- Example Projects
  - Building customizable data science tools to support advocacy
  - Data analyses with environmentally meaningful delineations
  - Conducting user testing of data tools (e.g. ECHO Notify) with frontline communities

But first, archive, archive, archive

- Right now, we first need to safeguard data
- Then focus on making it more accessible and useful

Public Environmental Data Partners

Purpose

- To preserve and provide public access to federal environmental data
- Smaller-scale complement to the End of Term Archive

Who We Are

- Formed in November 2024
- Several organizations, including Environmental Policy Innovation Center, Open Environmental Data Project, and more

How We Work

- Collaborative coalition
- Non-hierarchical, working groups with a central steering committee

Public Environmental Data Partners

Data Preservation

- Sought recommendations from diverse network; largely focused on environmental justice and climate
- 300+ datasets requested
- ~200 have been archived so far

Public Environmental Data Partners
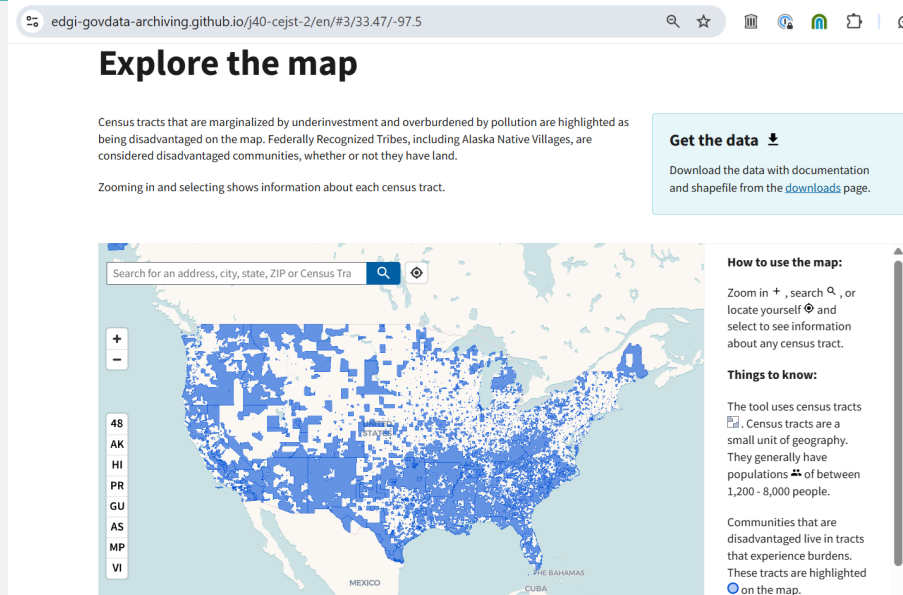

Tools

- Cloned or rebuilt 6 of the 9 federal equity screening tools that have been removed
- Including EPA's EJScreen and CEQ's CEJST

Public Environmental Data Partners

First Next Steps

- Preservation:
  - Ecosystem data – FWS, USGS, USDA, etc
  - More climate data – NOAA, NASA
- Tools
  - Re-create more existing tools
  - Improve their accessibility and use

Longer-term Needs and Opportunities

- Serve as data aggregators and disseminators
- Model greater accessibility and interoperability, as well as data justice in data policy and infrastructure
  - Blueprint for government how to implement FAIR and CARE principles

Thank You!

Preserve and promote data and the public's Right to Know!

DATA LUMOS   Find Data   Upload Data   About DataLumos

A crowd-sourced repository for valuable government data

DataLumos is an ICPSR archive for valuable government data resources. ICPSR has a long commitment to safekeeping and disseminating US government and other social science data. DataLumos accepts deposits of public data resources from the community and recommendations of public data resources that ICPSR itself might add to DataLumos. Please consider making a monetary donation to sustain DataLumos.

Data Inventory Spreadsheet and Workflow

	A	B	C
	Process for data rescue
		1a. Check the data rescue tracker to see if the data have already been rescued.
		1b. Decide which agency you are most interested in collecting data for. There are different tabs at the bottom of the document. If you would like to rescue data and do not see a tab for the agency or office, feel free to add a new tab.
		2. Review the MIT Checklist for data rescue in the US
		3. Add your information to the relevant row in the Agencies tab (for example: IMLS or MBDA). Many of the tabs already have datasets listed so you may be able to skip this step
		4. Capture ALL necessary information and documentation in addition to data files, if they are data related (e.g., codebooks, data dictionaries, metadata, data stories). If the site does not contain data, make a note of it (these pages can still be nominated to EOT, but documents not relevant to data should not be loaded into Data Lumos)
		5. Organize the documents and data in a logical fashion (i.e., by year)
		6. Flag any datasets that are behind explorer tools or otherwise difficult to download. These can be indicated in the Data Downloadable column.
		7. Nominate the links of dataset to the U.S. Government Web & Data Archive 2025 (this replaces the EOT web archive as of 2025-04-01)
		8. Zip the files.
		9. Submit the data files to Data Lumos.
	Fields in each tab of the sheet (dividid by agency)
		Admin Notes	perceived threat or known issues
		Data Added (Y/N/IP)	Has a link to the data been added to the spreadsheet
		Title of Site	The human-readable name of the website

Important Note

Due to ongoing volatility of federal webpages after the change in administration, some links on this guide may not be working or work only sporadically. For more information, please see Federal Government Information After the 2025 Transition.

If you find a link is not working, I suggest checking the Internet Archive to see if an archived version is available there. To do so, just paste the url into the top search bar and look for blue circles on the calendar, which indicate successful captures. Hover over the blue dot and click a timestamp to go to the archived page.

Trump Trackers	Federal Government Information After the 2025 Transition

This page is an attempt to provide current awareness of federal government reports and activities. The page will be updated weekly to provide links to important, newsworthy, or interesting material published during the previous week. The goal is to keep the links to a manageable number for readers, not to be a comprehensive listing. All links are captured in the Internet Archive if possible, and a list of earlier roundups is available.

Please keep in mind that government agencies may present material in a way that reads favorably for the government. You are encouraged to consult other resources (e.g. newspapers) for additional information and/or context.

You can sign up for email notifications of updates by hovering over the Weekly Roundup tab above and clicking "Receive Notifications," then entering your email address and hitting the subscribe button on the right side of the page.

About

This page compiles media/Bluesky reports of content being removed from, or altered on, federal webpages, as well as reports about attempts to rescue such material. I've listed most of these at the bottom of each Weekly Roundup, but am also adding them here to provide more streamlined access. I'm certain the list is not exhaustive, and I've tried to exclude articles that are highly duplicative of others on the list.

Please Note:

I usually run one or two link checks of the GovSpeak site each month and provide a final list of errors/changes at the end of the month. Because of the ongoing uncertainty with federal websites under the new administration, I'm doing more frequent link checks on the GovSpeak site and will provide here a working copy of pages that appear to be down/missing and other changes. I'll continually edit this list during April and provide a final list at the end of the month. Note that this April list does not include bad links identified in other monthly lists.

The vast majority of sites below are HUD webpages that were either moved or deleted in the department's recent redesign. Redirects are not in place and I've not yet located a new active page on the new site. I'll continue reviewing and update as needed, but the new site notes "the new website features about a 90% reduction in content from the previous website."

Tracking Tools

These tools may be helpful in keeping track of the many changes being made by the Trump administration. Please feel free to contact me at k5smith@ucsd.edu with suggestions/comments.

Apportionment

- OpenOMB (via Protect Democracy)
  - tracks how the president, acting through the Office of Management and Budget, implements Congress's spending laws

Cabinet/Appointees

- Trump Cabinet confirmation status: Which nominees have been confirmed? (via AP)
- Trump Appointees' Corporate Conflicts of Interest (via Public Citizen)
  - tracks prior employment and former clients/business interests

Campaign Promises

- MAGA-Meter: Trump's Second Term (via Politifact)
  - tracks campaign promises and rates whether the promise was achieved
- Tracking Trump's presidential promises (via AP)
  - tracks status of campaign promises; links to related AP articles for additional information

Climate/Environment

- Climate & Clean Energy Rollback Tracker (via Climate Action Campaign)
  - tracks actions to roll back, attack, and weaken key climate policies
- Climate Backtracker (via Sabin Center)
  - identifies step taken to scale back or wholly eliminate federal climate mitigation and adaptation measures
- Federal Environmental Justice Tracker (via Harvard Law School)
  - tracks regulations, policies, and other federal actions that affect communities' exposure to environmental pollution
- Federal Environmental Web Tracker (via EDGI)
  - direct link to 2025- google sheet
 - tracks documented changes to environment-related federal webpages that EDGI's team deems noteworthy; relaunched

About

There has been a dramatic shift around federal government resources and information since the change from the Biden to the Trump administration. This guide is intended to help you understand what's going on and find alternative access to resources. Please be aware that links to federal resources found in the Library catalog, on our Library Guides, and elsewhere may be affected by these changes. The best place to search for archives of missing federal webpages is the Internet Archive's Wayback Machine, and you are welcome to contact me if you need further assistance with federal resources.

Old Problem, New Challenges

The federal web landscape changes with every new administration to reflect changes in policy, which means there has always been a problem of certain federal information/websites being taken down when a new administration begins. The difference this time around is the scale and speed of change. Entire offices, such as USAID and the Department of Education, are being closed or threatened with closure. Large numbers of websites, datasets, articles, and other types of content have been deleted or altered. Research grants have been terminated. Massive dismissals of staff mean fewer people to research, create, publish, and maintain information resources such as websites and databases. Resources we have relied on for years may no longer be available, and access to certain federal webpages may change from day-to-day or even hour-to-hour.

Information related to diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility (DEIA) has been hit especially hard, following White House executive actions including new executive orders (EOs) and rescission of EOs from previous administrations. Environmental justice, vaccines and other health information, census research, the January 6 attack on the Capitol, and other important issues have also seen significant changes across federal websites. There's a helpful Wikipedia page that outlines some of the most affected agencies and resources.

Many organizations are doing great work to help preserve and provide access to federal websites and data. The list below highlights a few of these organizations and archives of federal data/websites.

I also highly recommend taking a look at these first three resources, which are guides created by librarians at other institutions. They include many additional resources of possible interest.

- Government Information Data Rescue (American University)
- 2025 Federal Data Availability (Ohio State University)
- Finding Government Information during the 2025 Administration Transition (University of Minnesota)

Climate Change and Human Health Literature Portal (CCHHL) data dump, via Internet Archive

Bibliographic information about research items (e.g. journal articles) as compiled by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS).

Data.gov archive, via Harvard Law School Library Innovation Lab

A regularly updated mirror of all data linked from data.gov.

Data Rescue Project

The Data Rescue Project is a coordinated effort among a group of data organizations. It serves as a clearinghouse for data rescue efforts and data access points for public US governmental data currently at risk. See what data is currently being saved via their Data Rescue Tracker.

DataLumos

A crowd-sourced ICPSR repository for government data.

EDGI: Environmental Data & Governance Initiative

Works to preserve data and web pages from EPA, DOE, NOAA, OSHA, NASA, USDA, DOI, and USGS. Monitors federal websites for changes made to environmental content. See also their Federal Environmental Web Tracker, which documents "changes to environment-related federal webpages that EDGI's team deems noteworthy."

End of Term Web Archive

Captures and saves U.S. government websites at the end of presidential administrations. The EOT project has preserved websites from administration changes since 2008.
