Avoiding the Needle in the Haystack: Identifying Non-Metropolitan Communities Needing Assistance

- Edward Kownslar, Collection Management Librarian, Mary and Jeff Bell Library, Texas A&M University - Corpus Christi

This poster will demonstrate how to use the "List of Distressed or Underserved Nonmetropolitan Middle-Income Geographies," which is published by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. The report is organized by state/territory, county, and census tract. A sample census tract will be used and analyzed with data from the Census Bureau and other Federal and state-level agencies. The report's methodology and background will also be explained.

Blast from the Past: Collaborating with GPO to Capture Fugitive Documents

- Michelle Donlin, Research & Instruction Librarian and Coordinator of Government Documents, Kemp Library, East Stroudsburg University
- Regina Braidotti, Government Documents and Maps Technician, Francis Harvey Green Library, West Chester University of Pennsylvania

This poster will illustrate our process in discovering a number of fugitive documents from the Atomic Energy Commission in our collection and the steps we took to get the bibliographic records into the CGP. This project is an example of how selective depositories, no matter their size, can collaborate with GPO and contribute to the greater documents community.

By the Numbers: An Analysis of Selection Profiles

- Hallie Pritchett, Head, Map and Government Information Library, University of Georgia

This poster will examine current selection profiles of Federal depository libraries to determine what percentage of libraries are still selecting tangible materials.

Celebrating 50 Years in the FDLP! Partnering with Your Campus Institution for Even Larger Promotional Outreach and Awareness!

- Andrea Craley, Manager for Technical Services & Government Documents Librarian, Harford Community College Library

Harford Community College Library, a 17% selective depository, celebrated 50 years in the FDLP in 2017 while the academic campus celebrated 60 years. Similar to the 40th FDLP anniversary activities in 2007, the Library celebrated the anniversary on Constitution Day, promoting the milestone to both the campus population and the surrounding community. This time, the HCC Library expanded that promotion to tie into the campus Hays-Heighe House's opening of its "APG Tech Revolution" exhibit, also celebrated by the campus' 60th, and partnered with the campus Paralegal Student Association, handing out Pocket Constitutions and promoting the Office of Student Activities' voter registration event. This poster will include a timeline and examples illustrating the extensive planning, research, marketing, and usage of promotional tools and anniversary logos from GPO and from our own institution. This resulted in a full day of events that included two living history Benjamin Franklin "Scientist & Inventor" Constitution Day programs, our FDLP 50th awards ceremony with the Honorable Davita Vance-Cooks as guest, and celebration cake, displays, and a giveaway of Pocket Constitutions and swag in the Library.

Celebration of 50 years of Being a Depository Library

- Wen-Hua Ren, Documents/Business Librarian, John Cotton Dana Library, Rutgers University

The poster presentation reports how John Cotton Dana Library of Rutgers University celebrates its 50th anniversary of serving as a Federal depository library. Activities include an exhibit of Federal publications, 50 mini-sessions on online Government resources, and a library guide including a page listing 50 popular Federal websites. This special celebration was featured in May/June 2017 FDLP Connection under Depository Library Spotlight.

Collaborating in the Academic Library: Reports from a New Government Information Librarian

- Jennifer Kirk, Government Information Librarian, Merrill-Cazier Library, Utah State University

As the new Government Information Librarian at Utah State University, I have set goals for improving access to Government information at Merrill-Cazier Library and for increased collaboration with colleagues both inside and outside the building. This poster will identify outcomes, highlight key strategies, and report on preliminary results for my first 6 weeks on the job. Anticipated results include data on new course collaborations, a summary of Constitution Day activities, and data from subject librarian interactions. This report from the front lines will help other FDLP professionals by identifying potential collaborations and activities they might undertake. It will be especially useful for those who, like me, are new to the FDLP.

FDLP Content

- Kathy Bayer, Senior Outreach Librarian, Government Publishing Office

Are you familiar with all “FDLP content” so you may draw upon these resources as needed? This poster will highlight FDLP information resources.

FDLP LibGuides

- Melissa Fairfield, Outreach Planning Specialist, Government Publishing Office
- Todd Scudiere, Technical Services Librarian, Government Publishing Office
- Ben Webb, Technical Services Librarian, Government Publishing Office

This poster focuses on FDLP LibGuides, a yearlong pilot that will be available to the entire FDLP community. Building on a small limited pilot, LSCM will create guides for use by depository libraries, as well as make guides created by FDLP libraries available to others. The poster will describe how FDLP LibGuides works, how it can be used, and how the service can help libraries serve patrons.

GPO's Preparation for ISO 16363 Digital Repository Certification

- Jessica Tieman, Preservation Expert, Government Publishing Office

This poster focuses on GPO's process to becoming ready for ISO 16363 Trusted Digital Repository Certification.

Hype and Hope: Librarians Respond Online to a New Presidency

- Rami Attebury, Head of Technical Services and Associate Professor, University of Idaho Library

This poster stems from a short lightning-round presentation given at the Northwest Government Information Network meeting in May 2017. Participants were asked to present on issues related to Government information availability as new presidents take office. To this end, I surveyed the GOVDOC-L listserv and ALATT's Facebook page to identify themes related to librarians' concerns about changes to Government information access.

Incorporating Government Documents into Africology & African American Studies Courses

- LaTanya N. Jenkins, Reference Librarian, Samuel L. Paley Library, Temple University

Working as a liaison to the Africology & African American Studies Department provides an opportunity for me to promote Government information resources. As a coordinator for Government Documents, I try to promote the collection by encouraging use of digital resources for access.

Office of Minority Health Resource Center: Celebrating 30 Years of Library Service to Communities of Color

- Faye Williams, Knowledge Center Manager, Office of Minority Health Resource Center
- Rachel James, Digital Access Librarian, Office of Minority Health Resource Center

Established in 1987, OMHRC is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year. Within the Center, the Knowledge Center Library maintains a collection of 60,000 books, Government documents and consumer brochures related to health issues that disproportionately affect minorities. Over the past 30 years, the library has progressed from providing answers to public inquiries solely by telephone and mail, to a publicly accessible collection, of which 70% can be accessed online. This poster will visualize the historical progression from core library services to outreach projects such as conference presentations, webinars, publications, social media, and library collaborations. Bibliographies and handouts will be available.

Who Gets to Graduate? How College Administrators Can Use Census Data in the Recruitment of Students

- Darren Sweeper, Head, Government Documents and Data Librarian, Sprague Library, Montclair State University

The purpose of this poster is to demonstrate the ways that current and historical data from the Educational Attainment in the United States: 2015 report may be used to project trends in demographics and social characteristics of adults to focus recruitment efforts on students who are more likely to graduate.
