DATABASE APPROACH.....	5

In the online world, as in the print world, library users approach journals in three distinct ways. They are looking for

- (1) articles on a certain subject, regardless of the sources,
- (2) articles already identified, or
- (3) the entire contents of specific journals (usually recent issues).

Libraries need to support all these approaches by providing easy access to journal contents. In doing so, libraries must intelligently choose their e-journal access approaches, depending on the user needs and the available resources of staff and time

Pick Your Park, Pick Your Programs

Do you know how to learn about all the programs available at your favorite park?

It's easy.

Go online to our Activities Search web page. In the drop-down "Place" box, select your favorite park. Click on "Search Activities." That's all there is to it.

There are other search criteria on the web page if you wish to use them, but to see all the programs at a select park, all you need to do is pick the park.
